Phase 1 Trials in the Era of Active Drugs

The therapeutic landscape in cancer has rapidly evolved with dramatic and prolonged responses observed in certain tumor types. This also led to a rethinking of early-phase clinical trial designs. In this talk, Prof. Dr. Hans Prenen would like to discuss the evolution of the process of optimally developing a novel cancer agent.

obtained his medical degree and PhD at the Catholic University Leuven (Belgium). He is currently Head of the Medical Oncology Department at the University Hospital Antwerp and Director of the Oncology Clinical Trial Unit. He is a member of several scientific organizations including the Belgian Society of Medical Oncology (board member since 2015) and the European Society of Medical Oncology (scientific committee).
